

Probably many of you know that family is considered a domestic Church. A home is a place where family prays together. What I propose here is a little bit more than prayer. I propose to do a family liturgy. Of course, Liturgy is a communal action so it will be helpful if you can do it together with somebody else. It is human action in response to the action of God. Liturgy obviously includes prayer, but includes much more. - This can include lighting candles, Proclaiming the word of God (it would take too much time now to clarify the difference between reading the Word of God and proclaiming it), responding to the word of God – in silence and/or vocal reflection (if nobody can say a reflection on the word of God, some reflection can be read). It seems I do not know how to explain it in a short way. I will simply offer links to several options on how to celebrate these holy days at home. Certainly, we invite you if you can to follow the streaming of our liturgies or liturgies on EWTN - but this is passive following. I suggest using the following links to create your more personal more active response to God.

Holy Thursday

First link is good example of the home liturgy. Although I ache to change some parts it would be to difficult now. But this brings a good point - there is nothing saying that you cannot change some parts and do it in the way which better fits your home. It is home liturgy – you are in charge.
